BUDAPEST PROCESS: INTERGOVERNMENTAL DIALOGUE ON MIGRATION

The Budapest Process is one of the longest-standing and major intergovernmental migration dialogues, whose Secretariat is hosted by ICMPD. Since the Silk Routes Countries started to participate in the BP in 2010, intergovernmental consultations clearly demonstrated the need for a longer-term vision for regional cooperation; this included policy-making, as well as substantial capacity-building and institutional development along the migration routes and improved international as well as inter-ministerial cooperation between the Silk Routes Countries and their European counterparts. Through direct support to the Budapest Process, the “Silk Routes project” aims to address the SRCs needs and operationalises the priorities of the Budapest Process through capacity-building under the Facility, MRCs, MIGRA.P and RELEC components.

Through project support, the dialogue is further strengthened, based on a shared and clear understanding of migration and mobility between Silk Routes countries, Central Asian countries and European counterparts. The project supported the 2019 Ministerial Conference, supports annual Senior Officials meetings, meetings of the Silk Routes Regional Working Group, as well as research outputs and regular networking with - and within - the Silk Routes Countries.

SYMBIOSIS: HOW DOES THE DIALOGUE COMPONENT LEAD TO EFFECTIVE RESULTS AND SUPPORT OPERATIONAL ACTIVITIES IN THE SILK ROUTES?

Migration dialogues are useful and relevant instruments for international cooperation when they both generate political support and provide for a strategic direction while ensuring a framework for achieving operational results through implementation of actions, for instance projects on the ground. The Budapest Process provides the platform for bilateral and multilateral networking and experience sharing as well as the political framework under which the project's objectives and activities are agreed, supported and being implemented. The Budapest Process initiates concrete action plans for the Silk Routes Region.

The different components of the Silk Routes project (Dialogue, Facility, Flagship Initiatives on MRCs, MIGRA.P and RELEC) are closely linked and support one another in the creation of knowledge, development of well-informed policies, enhancement of institutional capacity and fostering of partnerships at local, regional and international levels. The Dialogue component's strong interlinkage with all other project components is crucial to realise the project's objectives as it allows for a continuous flow of information between decision makers and practitioners. Ideas, knowledge and experience generated and tested on the ground inform the policy and decision makers who can share and disseminate the good practices identified and create the necessary cooperation frameworks for their advancement.
